

Saving the Prayer Tree: Struggling with Church Changes and Elder Abuse

Sabra Kelly and other elderly ladies struggled with the changes going on in their church. They often discussed their disappointments with the leadership, the music, and the worship styles. Adding to their dissatisfaction was an attempt to cut down an old magnolia tree, a major part of the church's heritage, beneath which early church services and prayer meetings were held. Because they expressed their opinions about church matters, these elderly ladies were often victims of elder emotional abuse. In addition to trying to solve church problems and trying to save the prayer tree, these ladies also regularly discussed two murders and helped to solve one of them.
